The facts in the case seem to be about as follows: A party of some thirty or forty men started from Texas, sometimes since. for the White Oaks mines, and from there they came on to Las Vegas, and were camped in the Exchange corral. Among the number there was an old man, by the name of D. Burns, who had between four and five hundred dollars on his person. Night before last, Mr. Burns left his party and went to the saloon just north of the GAZETTE office where he took coveral drinks. After he had been there for a while he was seen to be led. off by a young man and taken to the west part of town, and taken into an empty adobe house. It is supposed, they had either drugged him be fore starting, or on the way, as the old adobe is the last thing that the old good attendance is requested. man seems to remember. On awakening some hours after, Burns found he had been robbed of his pocket book and its intire contents. The full amount it is thought was nearly or quite five hundred dellars. This was a dastardly piece of work, and the perpetrators should be hunted down and punished to the fullest extent of the law. This thing of taking advantage of a man because he is unsuspecting, is one of the worst features of spciety and cannot be too promptly suppressed. Men, too, when going into a strange city should learn to keep their heads, as there are gouls and to the general rule.

Yesterday a man by the name of Morgan, who keeps the stage station between Gallinas and La Cinta, came up to Las Vegas to obtain a load of feed for the use of the station horses. It seems that Morgan owed a Mexican at Romeroville for a mule, which Morgan had agreed to pay last Tuesday, but the stage company failing to pay Mr. Morgan, he was not unable to pay the Mexican at the time agreed Springs, left quite a number of so entitled to the Hot Springs and ment sworn out, and when Morgan yesterday. passed Romeroville on his return Romeroville. The first thing the bonate ores. pursuers did, was to cover Morgan, who had stopped for dinner, with a Winchester rifle and order him to get do. The horses were then hitched to the wagen and driven back to Las Vegas and taken possession of. The officer also wanted to take possession of the load of Government stores, but was ordered not to, by Mr. Teats. The matter has engendered considerable bad blood and the hasty and rough manner in which the affair was carried on was hardly necessary.
